

Daniel B. Rowland Community Internship Award / Robert M. Ireland Undergraduate Research Scholarship

Daniel B. Rowland Award:

In his long career as a member of the University of Kentucky History Department, Dr. Daniel Rowland served as a strong advocate for community engagement and local historic preservation, and he continues to work vigorously to promote public history and community development. The Daniel B. Rowland Fellowship has been created to help students pursue summer internships, particularly in community service, historical education, or historic preservation. The award will provide a stipend of up to $1000 to offset living and other expenses that one might incur through pursuing such an opportunity. To be considered for the Rowland Award, you must be a rising sophomore, junior, or senior history major or minor.

Robert M. Ireland Undergraduate Research Scholarship:

The Robert M. Ireland Undergraduate Research Scholarship in History allows the Department of History to honor one of its most esteemed faculty members, Dr. Robert M. Ireland, who spent his career at UK devoted to encouraging excellence and providing mentoring, advice and support to generations of History majors. Students who are doing summer research, broadly defined (primary and secondary research projects, through internships, or in the course of a study abroad project) can apply for one of five $1500 awards. To be eligible you must be an undergraduate student who has earned at least 60 hours. You must be a history major, a history minor or have earned a significant number of history credits.

The application for both awards can be found on the History Department website. They must be submitted to Dr. Melanie Goan (1741 POT) by noon on Monday, April 22, 2019.
